INTRODUCTION.

THE work of arranging and cataloguing the contents of the Evidence Room at Berkeley Castle was begun by Mr. EDWARD PEACOCK, F.S.A., the well-known Antiquary, in the year 1886, but his health not permitting him to finish it, the present writer was invited at the end of 1889 to take it up where Mr. Peacock left it. Under the latter's direction some of the earliest and most valuable Charters had been placed on one side, many more had been sorted roughly into periods, and, in addition, a considerable number of the Court Rolls had been calendared.

It was decided at the outset that, as far as was practicable, the collection should be divided into two classes—a general and a select series, a plan not always to be recommended, but necessary in this case on account of the bulk of the collection. The present catalogue is that of the select series only, the catalogue of the general series being preserved in manuscript in the Evidence Room.

Before noticing the deeds themselves, it may be thought advisable to give a short account of the earlier members of the family.

Harding, whose son Robert, commonly called Robert Fitzharding, laid the fortunes of the family, has been, till within late years, considered, locally at any rate, to be the son of a King of Denmark. This tradition is traceable to the preface appended by Abbot Newland to his transcript of the pedigree-roll,¹ originally drawn up by John Trevisa, the translator of Polychronicon, who was also Vicar of Berkeley, and died in 1411. It is probable that the early Abbots of St. Augustine's, Bristol, were the originators of the tale, thinking to enhance the glory of the family from whom they had received so many benefits, and to magnify, at the same time, the reputation of their own Abbey which owed its very foundation to this Robert, son of Harding. The investigations, however, of later and less interested historians,² make it plain that Robert's connection with the Royal House of Denmark is a myth, and that Harding was simply the son of Eadnoth, Staller or Master of the Horse under Edward the Confessor, Harold, and William. Eadnoth, who held large estates in the West of England, was killed in 1067 in driving off the invasion of Harold's sons with a Danish fleet off the coast of Scotland.

Robert Fitzharding was an important man in the days of Stephen, having succeeded Robert of Gloucester as Reeve or Steward of Bristol. Like the latter he supported with his men and his money the cause of Empress Maud and her son Henry, Duke of Normandy. The author of the Lives of the Berkeleys,³ John Smyth, of Nibley, throws light on the relations of Robert with Duke Henry in the following words :

“ Whillst Mawd the Empresse and Henry Plantagenet

her sonne were contendinge with the usurper Stephen for the Crowne, much of their residence was at Bristowe, as also was the Education of the said Henry, there brought up in Learninge from the fowrth to the viiith yeares of Stephen, which presented one of y^e many occasions of that great familiarity and love, which alwayes after continewed betwene the sayd Henry and this Robert, And perhaps also theire affections (besides theire neer alliance in blood) somewhat the more sympathized, by being both of them the grandchildren of Kinges, And soe far forth ere that Crowne claym was settled did the Empresse and her sonne Henry make use of the purse of this Robertt in that wantful tyme of theirs, that from Roger of Berkeley, Lord of Dursley were his fee farme lands of Berkeley taken by this Duke Henry and Mawde his mother for the causes formerly mentioned, And for an hansell (as it were) of that lumpes which followed, one hundred pounds worth of land of that of Berkeley with the Manor of Bitton, was given to this Robertt and his heires by Deede (yet remayneing under seal).”

When Henry came to the throne in 1154, or rather a little before that event (cf. Sel. Ch. 1, 2), he not only granted the Manor of Berkeley to Robert but also stipulated that a castle should be built there. “Accordingly, as Smyth says, “the castle was built at Berkeley, where yet it standeth in “the most conspicuous and convenient place for ayre, “water, pasture, meadowe, wood and benefitt of the great “River of Severne that that fruitfull vale could then “affoord, And to see the buildinge thereof the sayd Duke “Henry came in person, as by his Deed of Confirmation of “Bedminster to this Robert dated at Berkeley may proba- “bly be gathered.” (Sel. Ch. 6).

The Manor and Barony of Berkeley had been, up to this time, held in fee-farm of the Crown by Roger de Berkeley, whom Smyth describes as a partisan of King Stephen. Sir Henry Barkley, however, who has, more than any other, made an especial study of the early house of Berkeley, throws doubt on this statement,¹ and argues from the fact of his near relationship to Robert of Gloucester and Milo, Earl of Hereford, the two chief supporters of Matilda, and for other reasons, that this was not likely to be the case. It is probable that he had kept aloof from active support to either side, and that when Henry came into power, finding that Roger neither joined his standard nor offered him pecuniary aid, he easily found a pretext in the non-payment of his fee-farm rent for depriving him of his rights in the Royal Manor of Berkeley, and bestowing the same on so staunch and active a supporter as Robert Fitzharding. Berkeley thus became the home of the Fitzhardings, who, in a very short time, assumed the name of Berkeley, whilst the original family retired to Dursley, where a castle already stood, which became henceforth the head quarters of the Berkeleys, from that time called Berkeleys of Dursley. Smyth's account is as follows :

“ When this Harry had obteyned his right he remembered the great kyndnes and benefites of the said Sir Robert Fizherding And gave unto him And to his Eyrys for evir the Barony of Berkeley whiche Barony Roger of Berkeley Baron of Dursley helde of the Kyng in fee farme And for so moche the said Kyng Harry the secunde toke from the said Roger bothe the Barony of Dursley and that of Berkeley for as moche as he toke partye w^t Kyng Stevyn agenst Kyng Harry, And also for as moche as he refused to pay the fee ferme of the Barony of Berkeley un to the said Kyng Harry. But then after the saide Kyng Harry entretid by the noble lordes of his Royaulme gave ageyne un to the saide Roger the Barony of Dursley as his owne heneritance. And the Barony of Berkeley he gave And confermyd un to the saide Sir Robert fizherding and his Eyrys for Evir (in recompence) of his grete costes and kyndenes. And when after Sir Robert fizherding was lord And Baron of Berkeley, the said Roger lord and Baron of Dursley vexed And troubled with him so grevously that he came un to the said Kyng Harry And prayed him to resume his yefte ageyne. But then after the saide Kyng Harry made a peace And a finalle concorde atwixe the saide Roger and Robert so that the said Roger shuld geve his doughter Alice to wife unto Morice the son and Eyre of Sir Robert Fizherding w^t the towne of Slimbridge."

By reference to this final concord, or marriage contract, of Maurice, son of Robert Fitzharding, with Alice, daughter of Roger de Berkele (Sel. Ch. 4), we find that it stipulates for a double marriage ; for, in addition to that of Maurice and Alice, a marriage is also to be had between Roger, Alice's brother, and Elena, sister of Maurice ; and that no accident might interfere with the carrying out of the contract, it is covenanted, that in case of the death of any of the contracting parties before the formal espousals, his or her place is to be taken by the next brother and sister in seniority, and in case none of Elena's sisters were to be had, her place is to be filled by the daughter of Hugh de Hasele, niece of Robert Fitzharding.

But the latter, besides being a man of action, was also given to good works, and he is perhaps best known as Founder and Benefactor of St. Augustine's Abbey, Bristol. The life of this Robert, warrior, pious founder, and subsequently monk, is thus summed up by the family chronicler:

“The life of this Lord convinceth the vanity of those that hope to purchase an endless memoriall unto their names, by workes proceeding rather from their greatnes, then from their virtue which therefore are noe longer their owne, then themselves contynue greate : Whereas this lord lyves in vertuous remembrance in after ages after the death of greatnes. A president most worthy of memoriall and imitation.”

A striking record of his piety is found in Sel. Ch. 14, which relates his grant to the Abbey of St. Augustine (of which he had laid the foundation in 1140), of the churches and advowsons of Berkeley, Wotton, Beverstone, Ashelworth and Almondsbury. He had already endowed the Abbey with many manors and lands, and presented his deed of gift at the High Altar on the day of consecration, Easter Day, 1148, and we may perhaps look upon this further endowment in the light of a thank-offering for a “happy issue” out of the perilous time of civil war, and in token of having received such practical proof of the approval and favour of his King. From this time, 1153 to 1170, when he died, we hear but little more of him ; we only know that some time before his death he became a Canon of the Abbey which he had founded, and was buried “between the stalls of the Abbot and Pryor there, and next to the Abbot’s stall in the entringe into the Quire by whom was after layde the body of the lady Eve his wife.”

Before continuing the account of the family it may be well to insert here the pedigree (abridged) of the earlier House of Berkeley to its junction with the Fitzharding family.

Maurice succeeded his father Robert, and was the first of this family who styled himself "de Berkeley." Smyth dubs him Maurice "Make-peace" in allusion to his marriage and the consequent union of the two families. Like his father he granted and confirmed possessions and privileges to St. Augustine's Abbey, in spite of which, however, he incurred the grave displeasure of the Abbot in the following way. He had enlarged the Castle, and in order to fortify it, had made a ditch on the north side which abutted on the churchyard, and having encroached a little on the church land, "the Abbot and Convent soe pursued him by ecclesiasticall censures (as though the offence had “ beene inexpliable) the merits of his father, himselfe, and “ brethren towards them quite forgotten, that they made “ himself to cast dust upon his owne face, and like a school“ boy by his Deed to say, that pro emendatione culpe mee

“ de fossato quod feci de cimiterio de Berkeley circa cas“ tellum meum, for redemption and pardoning of my offence “ comitted by mee upon the Church yard of Berkeley in “ making the ditch about my castle, I doe give unto the “ Church of Berkeley five shillings rent for ever issuing out “ of my mill under my Castle.” The deed embodying the above transaction is not now among the muniments, but a record of it will be found in the Abbey Chartulary (the Red Book) now preserved in the Castle, and numbered in this catalogue, Select Book, No. 1. Maurice never recovered the Abbot’s favour, nor would he even at his death become reconciled, for he left instructions that he should not be buried beside his father in the Abbey, that his anniversary should not be observed there, nor devotions “ pro salute anime ” performed.

He was the founder of the Hospital of the Holy Trinity at Longbridge in Berkeley, to be governed by a custos or warden, and Sel. Ch. 28 is a covenant between the Church of Berkeley, the Abbey of St. Augustine and the Hospital, whereby it is agreed that the Chaplain of the Hospital shall do fealty to Berkeley Church in presence of the Abbot and Lord Maurice, with special conditions as to oblations and right of burial. The hospital stood at the north end of Berkeley, just outside what is now the Town of Berkeley. In Smyth’s time [17th cent.] the ruins were still standing “ amidst the banckes of divers fishponds.”
To-day neither the ruins nor the fishponds remain.

Lord Maurice was succeeded by his eldest son Robert, whom Smyth names Robert the Rebellious, because he took so active a part in the wars which disfigured the last years of the 12th century and culminated in the granting of the Great Charter in 1215. Robert's name is amongst those mentioned by Roger de Wendover¹ and Matthew Paris² in their chronicles as taking a lead in the revolt of the Barons, and in the list of those excommunicated by Pope Innocent III. his name is found next following that of his cousin Maurice de Gant, grandson of Robert Fitzharding.

Though twice married he had no children, and died on 13 May, 1220. He was buried in St. Augustine's Abbey, as Smyth quaintly remarks "in a monck's cowle, an usuall fashion for great peeres in those tymes esteemed as an amulet, or defensative to the Soul, and as a scala cœli, a ladder of life eternall." Moreover Abbot Newland relates in his chronicle-roll "For this good lord Sr Robert de Berkeley is yearly done a spetiall memoriall at the Vigile of his obitt, placebo et dirige, solemnly, And on the morrow commendations, the pryor sayinge the Masse, And a Doale then after disposed under this forme, The Abott hath a cake of two pence price and two casts of bread of three to a peny, and fower pence for wine, And every Channon a cake, price one peny, but the prior, subprior and Almener have twoe penny cakes, And every Channon a Cast of bread and two pence for wine, And every Fryar of the fower Orders in Bristol a loafe, And every Prisoner there in Newgate likewise, And the remanet is doaled at the Monastery gate to the poore people."

Thomas, 4th Lord Berkeley, though he confirmed his predecessors' grants to St. Augustine's Abbey, besides granting much other property of his own, yet did not escape being impleaded by the Abbot before the Pope's delegates for the tithes of his pannage,¹ fisheries, mills, etc., [Sel. Ch. 240] and for encroaching on the Abbey lands, but at length, in 1236, the parties and their friends meeting on neutral ground, namely St. Peter's Church at Gloucester, a settlement of the dispute was arrived at, both parties taking a solemn oath to abide by the decision of the arbitrators. He also endowed with a particular liberality the Abbey of Kingswood. He died in 1243.

Smyth, in explanation of the surname he gives him, the Observer or Temporiser, says "Hee so evenly observed a prudent inclyninge after the strongest powere that hee ever avoyded those Court and Country stormes which in his tyme blewe downe many stronger Cedars than himself. Our days tell us, that this prudence is to be a bending withy, not a stubborne oke, A president for present tymes, And hee that taught us to be harmlesse as doves, bad us also bee wise as serpents."

Having thus briefly sketched the origin of the family, and the lives of the first four lords, we will insert the pedigree of the new house of Berkeley up to this point, before passing to single out for observation a few of the deeds which are described in the Catalogue.

It should be first stated that the deeds are catalogued into four great classes. viz. Charters, Rolls, Books, Letters.

1. The Charters. The arrangement of the charters, which date back to the time of Stephen, is chronological, and included in this select series are (a) every deed in the whole collection which bears, or to which may be assigned, a date prior to 1250, (b) all deeds after that date remarkable for their subject-matter, caligraphy, seal, or any other cause, and (c) all wills and inquisitiones-post-mortem, whether originals or copies.

In these remarks it will not perhaps be necessary to touch upon the earlier charters, many of which are given in full in the catalogue, while some have been incidentally discussed in the foregoing observations.

Attention may be called to five charters (numbered 50, 104, 110, 217, 430), which refer to the endowment of a Friary in the church of St. Michael in the Island of Step-holm. Till the discovery of these deeds, nothing, as far as I am aware, has been known about this Religious House beyond what Dugdale states in his Baronage, i-355. He is speaking of the Maurice, Lord Berkeley, who died in 1326, and says, "He built a Friary in a place called the Holmes (an Island in Severne) not far from his Manor of Portbury." He mentions as his Authority an Accompt-roll of the Bailiff of Portbury, 8 Edw. II. Unfortunately this document is not amongst those preserved at Berkeley, so that we are unable to refer to it. The other ordinary authorities, namely, Tanner, Collinson (History of Somersetshire) and the Editors of Dugdale's Monasticon, repeat but do not enlarge on the brief information given in the Baronage. In going to Smyth for corroboration of the statement, nothing is found, and it is not till he comes to the life of a later

Lord Maurice, [1361-1368] that he mentions Steepholm or Uphill at all, but he records that that lord purchased in 26-28 Edw. III. "divers lands and tenements in Chrykston [Christon] and Uphill," and, amongst the lands of which the same lord died seised in 1368, is "the isle of Stepholmes in Seavern." Nor is it surprising that amongst the Berkeley muniments no deed is to be found to throw a light on this mysterious foundation of a House which existed 150 years before its reported foundation. For these five charters are all of a date anterior to Lord Maurice the reputed founder, and they go to prove that the Friary existed as early as the end of the 12th century.

The Island of Steepholm is an almost inaccessible rock rising perpendicularly out of the R. Severn, just opposite the mouth of the R. Axe and the village of Uphill on the Somersetshire coast. It was probably on account of its isolation and inaccessibility that Gildas, the ancient British Historian in the 6th century, chose it for an asylum during the conflicts between the Picts, Scots and Saxons, while he wrote his Liber querulus de excidio Brittanice. We hear of the Island again in 916, when the Danes¹ being repulsed at Watchet took refuge upon it. It is also reported that Githa, the mother of Harold, retired to it after the battle of Hastings.

Of the five charters, No. 50 records the grant by Robert fil. Ricardi, of the church of St. Nicholas of Uphill to Saint Michael of Steepholm and the Brethren or Friars "there serving God." It is undated, but the handwriting is sufficient to prove it to be of the time of Richard I. No. 104 is a confirmation by John de Ken of another grant made by the same Robert of a piece of land in Uphill to "St. Michael of the Island called Steepholm and the Brethen there dwelling together." This was a somewhat later transaction, and may be of the time of King John. Nos. 110, 217, are similar confirmations to the Brethren of grants by the said Robert. But the last of the set, No. 430, which is dated 1260, is of a different character. For some time previous to this latter date it appears that the Island belonged to R. de Tregoz [probably Robert Tregoz, Baron, who was slain at Evesham in 1265] who had granted it with the Friary to the Austin Canons of Studley, co. Warwick. By the charter under discussion the Bishop of Bath and Wells directs that they shall appoint two of their Canons to reside in the Island, the senior of whom shall be called the Prior of Steepholm, and gives further instructions as to future nominations to that office. Subsequent to this date there is no mention amongst the Berkeley muniments of the Island or the Friary.

Select Ch. 466 tells the story of Stephen de Segrave's departure over the seas, leaving his substance in the hands of one R. de Stanton, and how the latter proved unfaithful to his trust and "wickedly spent by his knavery and foolish company £30 out of his master's treasure." Unable to make good this deficiency he raises the amount on the security of his manor of Stanton and two "roots of the herb called maundragon" or mandrake. This herb must have been a valuable possession to be thus particularly mentioned. It was apparently used as a narcotic, and there were many superstitions regarding it. In the herbarium of Apuleius¹ it is said to be good (1) for headaches (2) for sores of the ears (3) for foot disease (4) for loss of wits (5), again for sore of sinews, (6) if one see some heavy mischief in his home. The value of the herb may perhaps be supposed to lie in its cure of the last of these misfortunes.

Sel. Ch. 536 is the covenant for the ransom of Maurice de Berkeley, captured at the battle of Poitiers. This Maurice, when he was quite a boy, had accompanied his father to the Scottish wars, and had received Knighthood at the age of seven, and at the age of eight had been married to Elizabeth, daughter of Lord Despencer. He subsequently served as an attendant of the Black Prince at Crecy, and at the siege of Calais. Smyth compiles his account of his achievements, and capture at Poitiers, from Lord Berners' translation¹ of Froissart's Chronicles, and from Howe's continuation of Stows' Chronicle, and I think no apology is needed for its reproduction here.

“And upon Munday the 19th day of September in the thirtieth of King Edward the third, Anno 1356 was fought the feirce and cruell battle of Poitiers in France by the black prince (so called for his redoubted martiall deeds, and not from his complexion) and his lords of England; whereat were taken prisoners John the French King and his son Philip. And amongst others of the English, in the middle ward of the battle with the prince (saith Howe and others) was the lord maurice Berkeley (then about 26 years of age) son to Thomas, Lord Berkeley, then living very old: who to use the words of Stowe, Howe and others, calling this Maurice a worthy man, for the space of two hours together with his men, never spared but would bee still in the forefront of the battle, invadinge his enemies with the first; This Maurice being in the Dolphins guard (the french Kings eldest son) sowed blows amongst them, first with a spear, then with a sword, and at length being all alone compassed with the multitude and sorely wounded was taken prisoner, Thus Howe and they. But Froissard the french priest a man much esteemed for the fidelity of his history, related the valor and fortune of this Maurice thus : Amonge the battles, recountrings, chases and pursuits, that (saith hee) were made that day in the feild, it fortun'd that an Esquire of Picardy called John de Helenes was fled from the battle and met with his page, who delivered to him a new fresh horse, whereon hee rode away alone ; The same season there was in the feild the Lord Berkeley of England a young lusty Knight who the same day had reared his banner, And hee all alone pursued the said John de Helenes ; And when hee had followed the space of one League, the said John turned againe, and laid his sword in the rest instead of a speere, and so came running towards the lord Berkeley who lift up his sword to have stroken the Esquire, but when hee saw the stroke come, hee turned from it, so that the Englishman lost his stroke, And John strake him as hee past on the arme that the lord Berkeley's sword fell into the field ; when he saw his sword downe, hee alighted sodainly of his horse, and came to the place where his sword lay, And as hee stouped down to take up his sword the french Esquier did peck his sword at him, And by hap strake him through both the thighes, so that the Knight fell to the earth and could not help himselfe ; And John alighted of his horse and tooke the Knight's sword that lay on the ground, and came to him, And demaunded if he would yeald him or not ; The Knight then demaunded his name, Sir, said hee, I hight John de Helenes. But what is your name ; certainly said the Knight, my name is Maurice, and am lord of Berkeley, a faire castle on the river of Seaverne in the Marches of Wales : well, sir, quoth the Squire then you shall bee my prisoner and I shall bring you in safe-guard, and I shall see that you bee heated of your hurt : well said the Knight I am content to bee your prisoner, for you have by law of Armes won mee ; Then hee sware to bee his prisoner, rescue or not rescue ; Then he Squire drew forth the sword out of the Knight's thighs, and the wound was open, then hee wrapped and bound the wound, and set him on his horse, and so brought him faire and easily to Chaterleant, and there tarryed more then fifteen dayes for his sake, and did get him remedy for his hurt; And when hee was somewhat amended then hee gat him a litter and so brought him at his ease to his house in Picardy, there hee was more then a year before hee was perfectly whole; And when hee departed hee paid for his ransom six thousand nobles, And so this Squire was made Knight by reason of the profit that hee had of the lord Berkeley. Thus Froissard."

It is this last sentence of the French Chronicler that reads Mr. Ruskin,¹ when discussing the "frankness" of the Frank, to read a lecture to the youth of to-day on the decay of chivalry, and the growth of a desire for knightly deeds, not so much for glory's sake as for the profit that might accrue thereto.

In the deed under notice the name of Maurice's capturer is given as Jehan de Bouch, chevalier, so that it is puzzling to find that Froissart calls him J. de Helenes. I can only suggest that he came from Helesmes,² a village near, and under the government of Bouchain, and so was known by both names. The ransom-money was not fully paid till Oct. 1360, though the prisoner had been allowed to visit England in the early part of that year at the request of the Earl and Countess of Arundel and the Earl of Salisbury, presumably to arrange for the raising of the money, and under a solemn promise to return by the "twentieth day after Michaelmas." He finally came home at the end of 1360, and succeeded his father as 9th Lord of Berkeley in October of the next year. He is said never to have recovered from the wounds he received at Poitiers, but, after seven years spent in retirement at his castle of Berkeley, died on the Feast of Corpus Christi, 1368, aged 37. It was for this lord's funeral that the curious item appears in the Computus of the Steward of Hinton manor, namely: "Three quarters, seven bushells of beans for supporting and fattening 100 geese against the lord's burial." (Sel. Roll 47).

No notice of the Berkeley Charters would be complete which did not contain allusion to the Battle of Nibley, which arose out of the great lawsuit between the Berkeleys, the Beauchamps, and the Talbots in the 15th and 16th centuries, and though it is not necessary to go into the matter at very great length, thanks to the exhaustive account¹ of the suit by the late J. H. Cooke, sometime Steward of Berkeley, yet, as many of the charters and rolls refer to the various phases of the quarrel, it will be necessary to explain the circumstances which led up to the suit. I will then, though more properly it should be included in my notice of the Rolls, give a transcript of Sel. Roll 137, which contains a contemporary copy of the angry correspondence which took place between Thomas Talbot, Viscount Lisle, and William, 12th Lord of Berkeley, which resulted in the battle of Nibley and the death of Lord Lisle.

Thomas, the 10th Lord Berkeley, died in 1417, leaving by his wife Margaret [ob. 1392] sole daughter and heiress of Gerard Warren, Lord de Lisle, an only child Elizabeth, married to Richard Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick. All her mother's inheritance now fell to the Countess of Warwick, but the Barony of Berkeley passed to Thomas's nephew James, who was next heir, being son of his brother James, who had predeceased him. But the Earl and Countess of Warwick not content with the inheritance of Lisle and Tyes (cf. note on p. 177), claimed also the Barony of Berkeley.

Unfortunately, at the time of his uncle's death James was away at his father-in-law's house in Dorsetshire, and the Earl and Countess of Warwick, who were at Berkeley, took advantage of this accident, and possessing themselves of Lord Berkeley's title-deeds and evidences, procured from the King the custody of the late lord's castle, manors and lands as long as they should be in the King's hands. James hurrying to the scene of action quickly caused a jury to be empanelled to enquire into the titles of the late lord's possessions, who found that James was his uncle's heir, and that he was, as such, entitled to the castle and twelve manors, which constituted the ancient Barony of Berkeley. Yet, though James thereupon did fealty and was accepted as the King's tenant-in-chief, the Earl of Warwick persisted in retaining possession of the castle. Under these circumstances James was driven to apply to Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, for his assistance, by which, only procured by aid of a bribe of a 1000 marks, he obtained licence to sue his livery of the Castle and Barony, and paid his baron's relief of 100 marks. Smyth's account of the matter is as follows :

“ This lord not finding in himself sufficient strength to wrastle with soe potent an adversary, And considering that all the old and principal servants of his unckle had turned their intelligences against him, And that hee was deprived of his antient evidences, wisely winneth with his purse the assistance of Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, the King's brother By this close compact this lord James who before was as a weak hopp, haveinge now got a strong pole fastly to wind about grew up and bore the fruite of his own desires.”

In 1426 a compromise was effected which was to last during the lives of the two litigants. The Earl of Warwick died in 1439, leaving no son, but three daughters, Margaret, Eleanor and Elizabeth, married to John, Lord Talbot, Edmund, Earl of Dorset, and George Neville, Lord Latimer, by whom, but especially by the eldest, Margaret, and her husband, the quarrel was renewed with all its ancient bitterness. The dullness of the contest was relieved by occasional skirmishes between the retinues of the rival claimants, and one incident is worth narrating. It is, that David Wodborne with other fellow-servants being sent by Lord Lisle, son and heir of Lord Talbot, to Wotton to serve a subpoena on Lord James, the latter "instead of obeying the proces not only beat the parties but will hee nill hee, inforced the said David to eat the subpena, wax and parchment." It is also related that on 6th Sept. 1451, the said Countess Margaret and her husband "by their subtile and damnable imaginations" suborned one Rice Tewe, servant to the Lord James, then in charge of the keys of the castle, by whose means early one day Lord Lisle entered "with great numbers of people warlike arrayed, And there tooke the said Lord James and his said fower sons in there beds, and there kept them in prison in great dures by the space of eleven weckes by the commandment of the said Countess, they by all that time knowing no surety nor certainty of their lives, but ever awaiting the hour of their cruell death."

It was not till just the end of his life that the Lord James was to have rest, for on the 22nd Oct. 1463, it was agreed between him and his chief enemy Margaret, now Countess of Shrewbury, "that they would thenceforth cease suites, and the residue of their lives live in rest and peace together." There was but little opportunity of the compact being broken, for James died 36 days after.

He was succeeded by his son William, at that time 37 years old, who at once renewed hostilities with the countess, but she too dying in 1467, her grandson Thomas, Viscount Lisle, took up the quarrel. "What angry charge," writes Smyth, "or motherly command the said Countess Margaret left to her ward and grandchild Thomas, Viscount Lisle, for pursute of these titles against her enemy this Lord William, charity forbiddeth mee to conjecture. Sure I am shee left him an high spirit fostered by malignant attendants morally hating this lord William, who forthwith fell into the plotts of the said Countesse; And havinge their main Ayme (as hers was) to get from him this Castle of Berkeley, which hee now kept as his sanctuary and subterfuge from detts, tagaryes, Statutes and the like; And which if they had effected, by all probability hee had been ruined; They fell to practise againe with the said Thomas Holt, then also his Keeper of Whitcliffe parke, whom they corrupted, and with Maurice King porter of his castle gates. The method of which trecherous plott and treaty the letters, bonds and patents that passed between them and Robert Veel the Viscount's Engineer, which to this day remaine in Berkeley Castle, shall speake themselves in their own language."

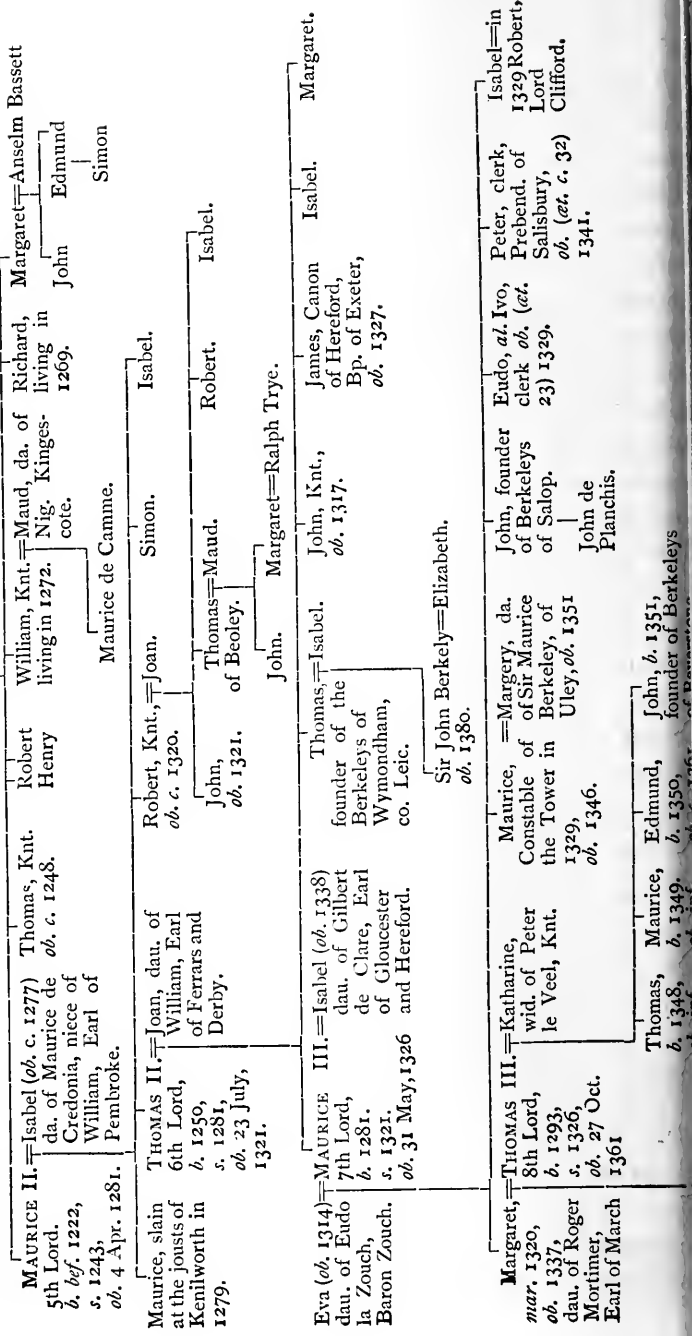

Smyth evidently here refers to the contemporary copy already alluded to (Scl. Roll 137), and as the contents of the letters are extremely interesting as specimens of fifteenth century correspondence, and show withal the progress of the quarrel, they are here inserted at length. The passages included in the square brackets are Smyth's comments.

By your sworn brother in the Parke of Whitclyffe in the outhouse without the logge, Thomas Holt.

[THE SAME TO THE SAME.]

My most trusty and welbeloved frend, I grete ye wele, praying ye hartely that ye will remember the matter that ye and I comoned of last, And for your matter, it is spede, your patent is spede of five markes and Wotton Parke, with all that belongeth theirto, and your obligacion also, and all other that ye understand that can prevaile you to grante them, fee by patent, terme of life.

[Nowe take the obligacion and condicion.]

Noverint universi per presentes me Robertum Vele teneri et firmiter obligari Mauricio Kinge in centum libris sterlingorum legalis monete Anglie, solvendo eidem Mauricio Kinge, et heredibus aut assignatis suis in festo purificationis beate Marie virginis proxime futuro post datum presentium Ad quam quidem solucionem bene et fideliter faciendam obligo me heredes et executores meos presentes. In cujus rei testimonium huic presenti scripto sigillum meum apposui. Dat. 26^{to} die Januarii Anno regni Regis Edwardi quarti nono.

The condition of this obligacion is such, That if the Castle of Berkeley bee brought into the hands of Thomas Talbot Lord Lisle by the faithfull help guyding and means of the said Maurice Kinge, And thereupon, That ye said Maurice have his sufficient patent delivered him under the seale of Armes of the said Lord Lisle, of the park of Wotton with the fees and wages of the keeping of the same of old time due and accustomed ; And moreover by the same patent have five marks annuite during his life to bee had and received yearly of the lordship and revenues of Wotton ; That then this obligacion to bee void, or els it doe stand in his full strength and vertue.

[Take also the Patent.]

Omnibus Christi fidelibus ad quos presens scriptum pervenerit, Thomas Talbot vicecomes Lisle salutem in Domino, sciatis me prefatum vicecomitem Lisle in fidelitate dilecti mihi Mauricii Kinge plenè confidentem, pro bono et gratuito servicio suo mihi et heredibus meis impendendo, concessisse eidem Mauricio officium custodis parci mei de Wotton subtus Egge in comitatu Gloucestrie ac ferarum ibidem existentium et ipsum custodem eorundem ordino et per presentes constituo. Habendum et occupandum et exercendum officium predictum pro termino vite sue, capi-endum pro officio predicto exercendo annuatim feoda et vadia eidem officio de antiquo debita et consueta, Acetiam sciatis me prefatum vicecomitem concessisse eidem Mauricio Kinge quendam annualem redditum quinque marcarum exentem de et in omnibus terris et tenementis meis in Wotton sub Egge in Comitatu Gloucestrie, Habendum et percipiendum redditum predictum annuatim prefato Mauricio ad terminum vite sue; In cujus rei testimonium presentibus sigillum meum apposui, datum 26^{to} die Januarii Anno regni Regis Edwardi quarti post conquestum Anglie, nono.

[This Robert Vele at this time was owner of Tortworth, Charfield and Huntingford, which last hee held of the viscount's said manor of Wotton by Knight's service, whose well contriving of this plott soe highly pleased the said viscount, That by his other deed under his seale of Armes of the same date, he gave to William Vele his second brother (or rather to him the said Robert in his brother's name) the office of Stewardship of his manor of Wotton, and the office of Keepership of his chace of Michaelwood, with the yearly fee of 13^{li} 6^s 8^d for exercise thereof, to bee issuinge out of his manor of Wotton, payable at the feasts of Ester and of St. Michaell by equal portions: which manor and chace are adjoininge to the other lands of the said Robert's].

[This plot thus contrived and brought to ripenes was soon after revealed to this Lord William, And as I take it, by Maurice Kinge himselfe, whereby in all probability the ruin of the person of this lord Wm. was prevented; And how deeply the blowe had also pearced into the posterity of this family, I take no comfort to consider.]

[The Viscount Lisle understanding by the flight of Holt and his repair to him how the plot was discovered, And the former writings under the scales of Armes of himself and Robert Vele come to the possession of his enemy the lord

William, hee then begins to unmaske himselfe, and openly to act his ill cogitations, whereby may bee read the former purposes of himself and his Counsell, And let the frute of the letter of challenge which from Wotton hee writes to this lord William tell us the nature of the tree : Thus].

William, called lord Berkeley, I marveill ye come not forth with all your carts of gunnes, bowes, with oder ordinance, that ye set forward to come to my manor of Wotton to bete it down upon my head : I let you wit, ye shall not nede to come soe nye ; for I trust to God to mete you nere home with English men of my one nation and neighbors, whereas ye by suttle craft have blowin about in divers places of England, That I should intend to bring in Welshmen for to destroy and hurt my one nation and Cuntry ; I lete the wit, I was never soe disposed nere never will be ; and to the proof hereof I require thee of knight-hood and of manhood to appoynt a day to meet me half way, there to try between God and our two hands all our quarrel and title of right, for to eschew the shedding of Christian menns bloud, or els at the same day bringe the uttermost of thy power, and I shall mete thee ; An answeere of this by writinge, as ye will abide by, according to the honor and order of Knighthood.

Thomas Talbot the Viscount Lisle.

[This letter was sent the nineteenth day of March in the tenth year of King Edward the fourth Anno 1469 about seaven weeks after the former plot was contrived, The said Viscount then somewhat under the age of twenty-two yeares having sued his livery but the 14th of July before whose lands then valued 1873 marks twelve shillings and three pence in old rent].

[This lord William receiving this letter at Berkeley Castle, the same day returneth this answer].

I marveill greatly of thy strange and lewd writing, made I suppose by thy false untrue Counsell that thou hast with the Hugh Mull, and Holt: As for Hugh Mull it is not unknown to all the worshipfull men of this Relme, how hee is attaynt of falsenes and rasinge of the Kings records; And as for the false mischevous Holt, what his rule hath be to the destruction of the King's lege pepull in my lordship of Berkeley, as well to the hurt of their bodyes, as the losse of their goods against Goddys lawe, consciens and all reason it is openly known, Soe that every worshipfull man should refuse to have them in his fellowship: and also of his own free will undesired of mee, before worshipfull and sufficient witnes, was sworn on a masse booke, that hee never should bee against mee in noe matter that I had a doe, and espetially in that untrue title that ye clayme, which ye hold my lyvelode with wronge, and where thou requirest mee of knighthood That I should appoynt a day and mete thee in the myd way between my manor of Wotton and my Castle of Berkeley, there to try betwyxt God and our two hands all our quarrell and title of right, for to eschewe the schedding of Christen mens bloud, or els the same day to bring the uttermost of my power, and thou would mete me, As for the determing betwixt our two hands of thy untrue clayme, and my title and right of my land and inheritance thou wottest right well there is noe such determinacion of land in this Relme used, And I ascertaine thee That my livelode, as well my manor of Wotton as my Castle of Berkeley, be entayled to mee by fine of record in the Kings Courts by the advice of all the Judges of this lond in that dayes being; And if it were soe that this matter might bee determined by thy hands and myne, the King our Sovereigne lord and his laws not offended, thou shouldst not so long desire but I would assone answeere thee in every poynt that belongeth to a Knight: for thou art, God I take to record, in a false quarrell, and I in a true defence and title, And where thou desirest and requirest mee of knighthood and of manhood to appoynt a day, And that I should bee there with all the power that I could make, and that thou would mete mee half way, I will thou understand I will not bring the tenth part that I can make, And I will appoint a short day to ease thy malicious hart and thy false Counsell that is with thee: faile not to morrow to be at Niblyes green at eight or nine of the clock, And I will not faile with Gods might and grace to meete thee at the same place, the which standeth in the borders of the livelode that thou keepest untruly from mee, redy to answer thee in all things, That I trust to God it shall be shewed on thee and thine to thy great shame and dishorship, And remember, thy self and thy false Counsell have refused to abide the rule of the grete lordis of this lond, which by my will should have determyned this matter by thy evidences and mine, And therefore I vouch God to record and all the company of heaven, that this fact and the scheddinge of Christen mens bloud which shall be atwixt us two and our fellowshipp, if any hap to bee, doth grow of thy quarryll, and not of mee, but in my defence, and in eschewing of reproche, and onely through thy malicious and mischevouse purpose and of thy false Counsell, and of thy own simple discretion; And keepe thy day, And the trouth shall be shewed by the marcy of God.

Lord Berkeley at once collected his forces, and having reinforced his own followers by a contingent from Thornbury under his brother Maurice (who was also his heir) and by a band of miners from the Forest of Dean as well as by, as it is said,¹ a company of citizens from Bristol under two merchants, Philip Mead (whose daughter Maurice Berkeley had married) and John Shipward, he appeared with his army, about a thousand strong, at Nibley Green at sunrise of the next day. Lord Lisle's smaller army was presently seen approaching the Green down the hill from Nibley church. The only account of the battle extant, is that by Smyth, "who heard it from persons whose parents were living at the time!":

He relates that "the place of stand was at Fowleshard, whence the lord William sent upon the lord Lisle the first shower of his arrowes: one black Will (soe called) should shoot the lord Lisle, as his beaver was up, And that Thomas Longe father of the said William was servant to one of them who helped to carry the Lord Lisle when he was slain." The latter's fall completed the rout of his party, and the victorious Lord Berkeley pushed on to Wotton Manor House where Lady Lisle then was, rifled her house "And thence (amongst other pillages) brought away to Berkeley Castle many of the deeds and evidences of the said viscount's own undoubted lands, many of which remaine there to this day."

Lady Lisle brought an action against Lord Berkeley for the loss of her husband, and after many delays it was settled that Lord Berkeley should have all the manors in dispute, and should pay Lady Lisle an annuity of £100 in settlement of her personal claim. Soon afterwards she married Henry Bodrugan, a Cornish gentleman, and several of their joint receipts for the quarterly instalments of the annuity may be seen at Berkeley [cf. Sel. Ch. 629].

Thus ended for a time this great family quarrel, the continuation of which may be found in the pages of Smyth and the Paper of Mr. Cooke's before alluded to. The latter years of Lord William's life were spent in quarrels with his heir, and in the attempt, by successive grants to the crown, to alienate from him and those who should come after him the greater part of the possessions which he had been at such great pains to secure. This too he did for the sake of obtaining from the crown a few empty titles and honours, "which, as the family chronicler quaintly remarks, are but men's breath, a blast of air and wind, If popular titles, the wind of a vulgar pair of bellows, If of a higher strain, the wind of a guilt pair of bellows, soe all but wind." The reversion of a moiety of the Duke of Norfolk's estate, which came to him through his mother, he assigned to the King's (Edw.IV.) second son the young Duke of York, for which the King created him a Viscount. On the 5th March, 1483, the same King made him a Privy Councillor [cf. Sel. Ch. 639]. On the 28th June, that is two days after his accession, Richard III. created him Earl of Nottingham [cf. Sel. Ch. 640], in return for which in 1485 Lord William granted to the King 35 manors, part of his Norfolk inheritance. On the 26th Oct. 1485, Henry VII. created him Earl Marshal, and finally on 28th Jan. 1489, the same King created him Marquis of Berkeley. For this last distinction he entailed Berkeley Castle and the whole remaining family estates upon the King, reserving only a life interest to himself. He died in 1491 covered indeed with honours, if not with honour, having by a stroke of the pen accomplished what all the machinations of powerful enemies during many years had failed to do. The King took possession of the whole and spent 10 days at Berkeley in that year with his Queen, Elizabeth of York. The Crown held the Berkeley estates till the death of Edward VI. without male heir, when they reverted to Henry Lord Berkeley, a minor. The warrant of King Philip and Queen Mary granting this lord special livery of the estates mentions that it is granted in consideration of the "good and worthie service of his Auncestors heretofore done unto our moost noble progenitors" as well of "some good experience of his [Lord Henry's] towardnes therein specyally in the late rebelleon attempted agaynst us by Thomas Wyat and other his complices."

There are six papal deeds in the collection. They include a grant of forty days' indulgence to all who shall make benefactions to the chapel within Berkeley Castle (Sel. Ch. 538); and licenses to Thomas, 10th Lord Berkeley, to have a portable altar, and to choose a "fit and discreet priest" as a confessor. But the deed which has most interest is a charter of Cardinal Pole, Papal Legate, dated in the third year of Queen Mary, granting to Henry, 17th Lord Berkeley, absolution from all dangers of excommunication which he had incurred during the late schism, with licence to use his chapel in his manor of Callowden, near Coventry, and to say mass, etc., there as his ancestor had done before the schism, etc. The deed is given in full on p. 216 of this catalogue.

Other interesting subjects referred to in the charters are: coal and coal-mines (745, 770, 771); the illegal exportation of corn by "covetous greedy and evell disposed farmors and others Ingrossers and Badgers" (759); the capture and punishment of pirates (761-764, 779, 781); measures for the improvement of the breed of horses (765, 766); tin-mines (773); boring for Fuller's earth and tobacco-pipe clay (872); the adulteration of soap, vinegar, butter, etc., with tallowe or other corrupt thinges" (872); instructions for conduct of seamen as to the use of bad language and the like, issued to masters of vessels on active service against the Spaniards in temp. Elizabeth (798), etc.

Many of the later deeds have reference to the various offices held by the Lords Hunsdon, Henry and George Carey, and notably, the captaincy of the Isle of Wight.

2. The Rolls. The first thirty-three rolls contain abstracts of Berkeley Charters, and the reason of their existence may be attributed to the following circumstances : On a former page it has been pointed out that when Thomas, Lord Berkeley, died in 1417, his daughter and son-in-law, the Earl of Warwick, taking advantage of the accidental absence of the lord's nephew and heir James, proceeded "to possess themselves of all the evidences of the said Lord Thomas, whereof forthwith they caused abstracts in many longe rolls of paper of each manor to be made of all such deeds as they tooke away," most of which rolls, adds Smyth, are in the said castle. But when the Lord James regained possession of Berkeley, the rolls were carried off to Wotton Manor House, where they remained till they were recovered after the battle of Nibley. It will be remembered that the victorious Lord William, on the death of Lord Lisle, hastened on to Wotton and "forthwith enforced and plundered the said manor house," and one of the rolls (No. 13) bears an endorsement to this effect, while the hand-writing of most of them goes to prove that they were written about this period.

Those of the Accompt-Rolls included in the Select Series have been chosen from a great number of others which will be found in the General Series, all of which would, I think, repay a closer examination. Nos. 39-46 are dated in 1327, and were chosen because they contain references to the imprisonment of Edward II. That monarch was removed from Kenilworth in custody of Thomas de Gournay and John Maltravers on the 3rd of April, 1327, arriving at Berkeley a few days after, which he never again left, being murdered on the 22nd Sept. 1327. Before leaving Kenilworth he had formerly renounced the Royal dignity, and wherever in these documents he is mentioned, it is as the "King's father" and not as "the King." Most, if not all, of the Berkeley manors were laid under contribution for supply of poultry, eggs, and the like, to the castle kitchen and larder, for support of the imprisoned King.

The first of the set, No. 39, gives, in detail, the expense of the Steward of Berkeley from 1st January to 29th September, 1327, and amongst the items is a payment to . . . de Gourne going to Nottingham with letters notifying to the King and Queen, Edward III., and his mother Queen Isabella, the news of the death of "the King's father." The roll has unfortunately suffered damage from damp, and it is impossible to say what, if any, relation the messenger was to Thomas de Gournay, one of the King's murderers.

In Roll 41, an account-roll of the Steward of Alkinton Manor, there are references to Queen Isabella's progress to Bristol and Gloucester, the fortification of Berkeley Castle "against the arrival of the Queen," etc., besides a curious item of "an oblation of a calf to God and to St. Anthony for the safety of the calves and the other beasts."

Amongst the expenses of the Bailiff of Hurst and Slimbridge Manor (Nos. 45, 46) is included the cost of repairing the chapel door of Slimbridge, "broken by the men of the Earl of Lancaster on the Queen's journey to Bristol."

In Roll 54 (dated 1607) we gain interesting particulars of the care bestowed upon the deer and hounds, the repair of the sea-wall, and fishponds, the provision of malt "for the Lord's Household in Buckhuntingetyme," mending of the sluices, the "dressing and barrelling of a great Sturgeon in Wyne, Perry and Vinegar," and of the great inundation of the R. Severn, "the like not beinge before hard of."

Roll 60 contains the expenses of the Lord Thomas at various jousts at Coventry and elsewhere, including "gifts to the players," and in this and several other of the Rolls will be found particulars of the cost of travelling, entertainment of visitors and similar interesting matters.

But perhaps the most valuable Roll in the collection is that known as Abbot Newland's Roll (Nos. 97-102). It was written by John Newland, Abbot of St. Augustine's from 1481 to 1515, and contains the history of the family from Harding. It was not, however, an original composition; for, as he says in his preface, he compiled and translated it "out of Latyn into Englishe." In a paper which I had the honour to submit to the Bristol and Gloucestershire Archæological Society in 1890, I was obliged to say that the original Latin Roll could not then be found in the Berkeley Evidence Room, but expressed a hope that before my work was finished it might come to light. That hope has been realised; and in Roll 102 we have the only remaining portion of this valuable record,—valuable, not only for its contents, but for the fact that it was the original production, if not in the very handwriting, of John Trevisa, the translator of Higden's Polychronicon and other works, who was, as is well known, late in the 14th century, Vicar of Berkeley, and Chaplain to Thomas, Lord Berkeley.

3. The Books. A few words will suffice to call attention to the Books. The most important is No. 1, the Chartulary of St. Augustine's Abbey, known as the Red Book. It was compiled at the end of the 13th century, but, like other manuscripts of its kind, has several additions in later handwritings. It contains 221 folios, the Chartulary proper beginning on f. 17, and is divided into two sections, the former which contains the Royal and other personal grants, ending on f. 44; and the latter containing the rest of the deeds arranged under places beginning with Berkeley. Bristol is treated on ff. 45 b, 168 et seqq., 211, etc.

Then follow John Smyth's Lives of the Berkeleys and Description of the Hundred of Berkeley, which were written in about 1618, and have been so often quoted above. The former gives in elaborate detail a biographical account of each Lord of Berkeley from Robert Fitzharding to Henry, Lord Berkeley (ob. 1613); while the latter, for its minute description of every parish and place in the Hundred, is of an importance to any future historian of the county scarcely to be exaggerated. Smyth was born in 1567, became Steward of the Berkeley Household in 1596, Steward of the Hundred of Berkeley in the following year and died in 1641. These volumes were most efficiently edited by Sir John Maclean in 1883-1885.

The only other books which call for special notice are the letter-books of Charles, 2nd Earl of Berkeley. He filled several important offices during the reign of William and Mary, and, in particular, that of Lord Justice of Ireland, to which he was appointed on 22nd August, 1699. Sel. Books 35 A—K (10 folio volumes) contain copies of the correspondence, warrants, reports, and other papers relating to the duties of his office, from 1699 to 1701.

This Earl had previously, as Viscount Dursley, filled the post of Envoy Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to the States of Holland, and Books 36 A, B, contain copies of his correspondence during his residence at the Hague in that capacity from 1689 to 1692, with Lord Nottingham, Secretary of State.

4. The Letters. These are now bound in two volumes, and are so fully described in their proper place as to need no further comment here.

It only remains for me to make my very grateful acknowledgments for assistance given in various ways during the progress of my work: first, to Lord and Lady Fitzhardinge, who, from the moment of my introduction to them in 1889 to the present, have shown me the utmost kindness and consideration, not only in giving me a free hand in the arrangement and scope of the work, and in so readily acquiescing in the suggestion that the catalogue should be printed, but also for the many hospitalities shown to me during my frequent visits to the Castle. My thanks are also due to Mr. E. Peacock for his readiness in helping me to take up the broken threads of his preliminary work and for advice on several points of difficulty, as well as to Sir John Maclean, K.B., of Clifton, Bristol, for valuable suggestions as to the publication of this book. I should be ungrateful if I did not express my appreciation of the many acts of goodwill shown to me by the Hon. Elton Gifford, his lordship's nephew, and by Mr. James Peter, his lordship's Steward, and lastly I would place on record my high estimation of the services of Mr. Herbert Cooke (nephew to that Mr. J. H. Cooke, F.S.A., sometime Steward of Berkeley, of whose many compositions on the Berkeleys I have been glad to make such free use), who has throughout the work proved himself a most efficient, painstaking, and intelligent assistant.

4. MARRIAGE CONTRACT between Rodbert Fitzharding and Roger de Berckele, made in the house of the said Rodbert at Bristol, in the presence of Henry, Duke of Normandy, whereby it is covenanted that Maurice, son of Rodbert Fitzharding, shall take in marriage the daughter of Roger de Berckele, with Slimbridge [co. Glouc.] as her portion, and that Roger, the son and heir of Roger de Berckele, shall take in marriage the daughter of the said Rodbert Fitzharding, with the Manor of Siston, near Bristol, for dowry. Circ. Nov., 1153. Lat.

Iste sunt pactiones que facte fuerunt inter Rodbertum filium Hardingi et Rogerum de Berckel' in domo Rodberti filii Hardingi apud Bristou in presentia domini Henrici ducis Normannorum et Aquitanie et comitis And[egavie] ejusdem assensu et in presentia multorum aliorum clericorum et laicorum. Mauricius filius Rodberti filii hardingi cepit filiam Rogeri de Berckel' in uxorem ita quod Rogerus dedit Mauricio cum filia sua in matrimonio Slimbrugiam que est de sua hereditate, hoc est decem libratas terre, et Mauricius concessu patris sui Rodberti filii Hardingi dedit filie Rogeri quam ipse cepit uxorem in dotem xx libratas terre de feudo de Berckel' assensu domini Henrici ducis. Tali conventione quod si Mauricius filius Rodberti moreretur antequam cepisset filiam Rogeri uxorem: frater ejus post eum primogenitus acciperet eam uxorem per supradictas conventiones. Et si etiam ille alter filius Rodberti moreretur ante sponsalia filie Rogeri: quisquis de filiis Rodberti post illum heres remaneret filiam Rogeri uxorem acciperet. Similiter si filia Rogeri antequam desponsaretur Mauricio filio Rodberti moreretur, secunda post ipsam Mauricio daretur in uxorem vel cuilibet fratrum suorum qui heres remaneret post Mauricium. Ita et de ceteris filiabus Rogeri si primogenite morerentur illa que remaneret post ipsas daretur illi de filiis Rodberti filii Hardingi qui heres ejus remaneret, sicut superius prelocutum est. Preterea filius Rogeri de berckel' qui heres ejus est debet accipere uxorem unam de filiabus Rodberti filii hardingi et Rogerus de Berckelai debet illi filie Rodberti dare in dotem manerium Sistone prope Bristou quod manerium est de hereditate Rogeri. Et Rodbertus filius Hardingi debet dare in matrimonium cum filia sua filio Rogeri x libratas et x solidatas terre apud Derselegam eo pacto quod si una de filiabus Rodberti filii hardingi moreretur antequam filius Rogeri eam acciperet uxorem: altera filia Rodberti daretur illi. Et si utraque filia Rodberti ante sponsalia moreretur: filius Rogeri qui heres ejus esset acciperet uxorem filiam hugonis de Hasele neptim Rodberti filii hardingi. Similiter si primogenitus Rogeri de berckel' moreretur ante supradicta sponsalia ille, de fratribus suis qui remaneret post ipsum primogenitus et heres acciperet uxorem unam de filiabus Rodberti filii Hardingi que domi sunt vel si utraque ante sponsalia moreretur, filiam Hugonis de Hasele per supradictas pactiones. Has pactiones affidaverunt Rodbertus filius Hardingi et Rogerus de Berckelai tenere et servare sine fallacia et dolo et posuerunt Dominum Henricum ducem obsidem et justician inter se de servandis his pactionibus. Hoc etiam affidaverunt viii probi viri ex parte Rodberti, et alii viii ex parte Rogeri quorum nomina hec sunt. Ex parte Rogeri, Willelmus¹ filius Henrici, Rogerus de Sckai, Radulphus de Huelega, Walkelinus, Engebaldus de Gosintunia, Guido de Rupe, Gwaiferus de Planca, Hugo de Planca frater ejus. De parte Rodberti, Hugo de Hasela, Nigellus filius Arthuri, Rodbertus de Saltemareis, Helyas frater Rodberti filii Hardingi, Jordanus frater ejus, Jordanus le Warre, Nicholaus filius Rodberti, David Duncepucke. Et isti viri Rodbertum et Rogerum in his pactionibus servandis totis juribus tenebunt. Quod si Rodbertus et Rogerus de his pactionibus vellent exire, isti cogent eos pactiones tenere quantum poterint. Et si ipsi adquiescere noluerint, isti viri de servicio et amore eorum recedent. Et propter has supradictas pactiones Rogerus de Berkele clamavit quietum totum ckalangium suum et quicquid juris habebat in firma de Berkelai.

This roll so often referred to by Smyth in his Lives of the Berkeleys as Abbot Newland's Roll, commences with the Abbot's preface, wherein he makes known the reasons which induced him to undertake the work, in these words: "And for this cause movid [viz.: that the names of benefactors to Religious houses should be kept in remembrance] I the foresaid John Newland Abbot for my more larger knowledge and informacion of my brethren Chanons presen, And for evir after to come have taken upon me to put into writing the lineall and [trew] descent of Sir Robert Fizherding the son and eyre of herding] whiche herding was son of the Kinge of Denemarke whiche Robert foresaide was first created lord of Berkeley and so lineally from him I shall continew unto] William now lord marquyes Berkley for whom And all othir of his noble auncetoures we ben bownde specially to pray and or [sic] that I shall begynne this said noble Petegre Firste y shall declare how the said Sir Robert fizherding was first made lorde of the Barony of Berkeley and shall expresse folowyngly certeyne convencions made atwixe the saide Sir Robert fizherding and Sir Roger of Berkeley lord and Baron of Dursley." He then gives an account of the causes and effects of the disorders in the reigns of Kings Stephen and Henry II., the services rendered to the party of the latter by Robert Fitzharding, and his practical appreciation of those services by giving to him "And his Eirys for evir the Barony of Berkley Whiche Barony Roger of Berkeley, Baron of Durseley helde of the Kyng in fee ferme And for so moche the saide Kyng Harry the secunde toke from the saide Roger bothe the Barony of Durseley and also the Barony of Berkley for as moche as he toke partis with Kyng Stevyn ayenst Kyng Harry."

The pedigree itself begins with an account of Harding, son of the King of Denmark, whose portrait is given, and from whom the family has generally been considered¹ to spring: "The Kyng of Denmarke had a secunde son namyd Herding which he send unto Kyng William Conquero^r unto whom this Kyng William Conquero^r gave grete riches and send him to Bristow there to inhabite the yere of oure Lord MLXIX. The cause of his comyng to this lande of Englande was this. As hit is wreten in Polecronicon, Ther was some tyme an ordinance made in Denemarke that if so the Kyng of lande had eny mo sonnes then on, then shuld the eldest son and eyre remayne w^tin the lande. And the yonger brethren shuld be sende with a substance of goodis in to othir landis and there to leve in evoyding all inconveniences of debatis that myght chauce atwixe them w^tin their owne lande. And for this cause Herdyng a secunde son of the Kyng of Denemarke was send in to this lande as hit is afore wreten."

The last entry runs as follows :

"William Lord Marquyss Berkley decessid withoute issue off his body begoten and gave the barony of Berkeley with all the londis Intaylid unto Kyng Henry the viiith and lyeth buryed in the church of Fryer Austyns in London."

Temp. Hen. VII. Vellum, with elaborately illuminated initials, etc.

98. CONTEMPORARY copy of Abbot Newland's Pedigree Roll of the Berkeleys: containing the Abbot's preface, etc.; the family pedigree to William, Marquis of Berkeley [ob. 1491]; and side by side with this family chronicle a similar chronicle of the Abbots of St. Augustine's, Bristol, from its foundation by Robert Fitzharding in 1140, to the election of Robert Elyot, 21st Abbot, who succeeded John Newland in 1515, and "Ruled right honorably."

On the other side of the Roll is a complete list of the Mayors, Sheriffs and Bailiffs of Bristol from "William Canyng, Maior, and Henry Vyell, vicecomes et primus Bristollie, and William Combe et Thomas Knappe, Ballivi [1374, the year in which Edward III. made Bristol a separate county], down to John Hutton, Maior, Thomas Jefferies and Johannes Spryng, vicecomites [1524]. Side by side with the list is a meagre chronicle of the deaths and accessions of the Kings of England; for example, "1272 [Anno] 56. Et obiit [Henricus III.] xvi Kal. Decembris sepultus apud Westmonasterium cui successit filius ejus Edwardus primus." Finally, there are in addition a few historical notes, of which the following are specimens:—

1520. This yere whete barly and benes where for the more part of the yere at xxij^d the bz [bushel] and above and grete sca [r]sty of corne was amonges the people. Also the same yere was beheddid the noble lord Edward Duc of Buckingham the xvij day of May and berid at the Austen Freris in London, and about Seint Jamis tide whete was at iij^s iij^d the bz.
